If a party submits the form electronically, the form will be delivered directly to the Clerk. It will not be filed on the docket sheet, and no judge will have access to the form. Alternatively, a party may print the form, complete it manually, and submit it to the Clerk's office.

You may decline magistrate judge jurisdiction without adverse consequences. The identity of any party who consents to or declines magistrate judge jurisdiction will remain unknown to the undersigned unless consent is unanimous. The undersigned will only learn of a party's election to consent where all parties have consented. In the event fewer than all of the parties elect to consent, the Clerk will not inform the undersigned of the identity of the non-consenting party or parties. If all parties consent, a magistrate judge will exercise full and final dispositive jurisdiction, and all appeals will lie directly with the appropriate United States Court of Appeals.
